Quality Care from Anywhere

Looking for a quick, low-cost way to talk with a licensed medical doctor? You may be able to skip the crowded waiting rooms and get quality care (and maybe even a prescription) by chatting with a doctor via your phone or computer.

Many carriers have partnered with best-in-class, virtual care vendors to expand their virtual care services (also called “telemedicine”).

Virtual care generally works best for simple, non-emergency situations like the cold or flu. During a video consultation, a doctor may be able to diagnose, write a prescription (if needed), and go over the next steps. Carriers may include expanded virtual care services for primary care, dermatology, physical therapy, mental health, and more.

The cost of virtual care through a carrier’s vendor is typically less than an in-person doctor visit. Select carriers may reduce or eliminate copays for virtual services, but benefits and availability vary by state and insurance carrier.

Your Goals, Moving Forward

Want to get back in shape? Or manage stress better? Your company and your medical insurance carrier may offer well-being programs that can help you achieve your goals.

Carrier lifestyle coaching programs range from self-driven online wellness portals to digital health assistants that can help members lose weight, stop smoking, reduce stress, and exercise more.

These programs also offer tools designed to keep members motivated, including wellness challenges and trackers for diet, exercise, blood pressure, and mood. Some carriers even offer discounts for gym memberships and incentives for completing certain tasks like losing weight.

Your Calm in the Storm

Are you taking care of your whole self? Overall wellbeing is much more than just your physical health, which is why mental health services are covered by your health insurance. Being strong and resilient in the face of life's challenges isn't always easy, and that's okay. For whatever challenges you and your covered family members may be facing, know that your insurance carrier can help.

In fact, medical insurance carriers have established mental health partnerships at no cost to you, and they are continually looking to partner with best-in-class vendors. They serve a wide range of needs and most of them are available virtually so they can fit into your schedule:

Self-driven apps that often include personalized care recommendations to help you manage your stress better through practices like meditation

Coaching that can help you work through emotional challenges to perform better physically, emotionally, professionally, and socially

Therapy for identification and resolution of mental illness

Centers of Excellence (COE) for those facing acute mental health issues such as addiction and substance abuse

Even if you don't think you need it—there's always room to build healthier habits, feel calmer, empowered, and more fulfilled in your life. Carrier mental health partnerships can help you reduce stress and anxiety and give you the tools to restore your peace.

Important: Many services are available to your spouse/partner and dependents. (In fact, Aetna and Cigna both offer Brightline, a mental health provider who specializes in pediatric mental health.)
